See the world — the oneworld way!

Have you ever dreamed of going to exotic places? The oneworld alliance can make these dreams a reality. Redeem your AAdvantage miles for a oneworld<sup>TM</sup> award that allows you to travel to several destinations, with multiple stopovers, on three or more of the eight oneworld airlines. As an example, AAdvantage Platinum® member Nigel was bound for an adventure in the rain forests of Costa Rica but wanted to stopover in Spain and the U.S. With the oneworld award, he was able to fly from Dublin to Madrid on Aer Lingus, then on to Miami on Iberia, and finally to San Jose on American. He visited three cities on one award ticket!

The number of miles needed for your award is based on total miles flown and class of service (First, Business, or Economy). For more details, visit aa.com/oneworld, then call American Airlines to arrange your journey.

LAN affiliate LAN ECUADOR is not a oneworld member and is not an AAdvantage participant.

Redeem your miles for awards on other airlines

Did you know that you can redeem miles for destinations served by other airlines* who participate in the AAdvantage programme, like British Airways**? It's true. American Airlines has a relationship with British Airways, other oneworld carriers and additional airline partners — over 20 in all. These agreements allow you to redeem miles for flights to more than 850 destinations worldwide. As an example, if you complete just two flights in American's Business Class from London to Miami, you'll earn enough miles for a flight on British Airways to Barcelona, Dublin or any other European destination you choose!

*For a complete list of airline participants, click on "Partners and Mileage Programs" in the AAdvantage section at AA.com.

**Transatlantic flights to/from the U.S. on British Airways are not eligible for mileage accrual or redemption.
